

6516207374.txt

I am a professional truck driver. As such, I depend on my radio to keep me informed on traffic situations in addition to providing entertainment. Local stations fall short of providing effective information in that 1. too much time between reports 2. having to scan stations in order to find a report and 3. The assumption that every one is local and knows each and every little road in town. XM, on the other hand has all the information I require and provides it in a manner that is truly useful to me. Radio stations are licensed to serve the public good. Banning traffic reports from XM (which does a better job of providing that service) or otherwise restricting the information available on XM is in direct violation of that policy. Quit messing with XM and let them provide the service that they are best at.